Texonet Renews Focus on Business Continuity

Edinburgh, Scotland (2nd June 2008) – Texonet today announced the creation of a dedicated business unit to focus exclusively on delivering Business Continuity software.

Texonet has now completed a long running reorganization of its key business units. The business continues to service its core markets but has increased its focus on the Business Continuity market place. A new business unit has been created to focus exclusively on its ImpactAware product line. This business unit is dedicated to delivering an aggressive business plan starting in the UK and quickly moving into Europe and beyond.

The business unit is to be led by Paul James former Head of Software at Texonet. “We have identified Business Continuity as a key growth area for Texonet“, said Niall Wright, CEO of Texonet, “and this reorganization will enable us to start delivering value to a much wider market”.

About Texonet

Texonet is a knowledge driven engineering and IT services company. The word “texo” derives from the Latin “to weave” and Texonet’s business lies in creating links between consumers of information and providers of data. Texonet aims to create these links irrespective of the data sources, the devices used or the transport methods involved.
